SOLEMNITY OF THE MOST HOLY BODY AND BLOOD OF CHRIST — CORPUS CHRISTI: Twice in today’s first reading Moses points out to the Chosen People that manna, the bread from heaven that sustained them in the desert, was previously an “unknown” food, foreign to them and their ancestors (Deuteronomy 8:3,16). For their journey to a new land, the Promised Land, God provided a new food. This was possible, since God is the source of all creation. Jesus creates a new food as well, transforming bread and wine into his body and blood. Like manna, it will sustain us on a journey, this time on a journey to eternal life. As with the Israelites’ journey, the sustenance is not just in the bread, but in God’s promise. Jesus promises the crowd that by eating his flesh and drinking his blood, they will have life within them. Paul refers to the fellowship created by breaking bread with others in that culture. Providing food and dining together create a bond. In the desert it created a bond between God and the Chosen People. In the Eucharist, it creates a bond between us and him whom we consume. Moreover, it creates a bond with each other as well. Jesus truly is our bread come down from heaven.

What are the implications of the bond we make with God and each other when we share together in the Eucharist?
